

Mauro Baranzini

c.v.

Mauro Baranzini, born in Bellinzona, Switzerland, on August 31st, 1944, first studied at the Universities of Fribourg, i. Ue., and Zurich. In Fribourg he earned a PhD in economics with a thesis on economic growth written under the supervision of Pietro Balestra, a well-known econometrician. Soon after, in 1971, he was awarded a two-year Florey European senior scholarship of The Queen's College, Oxford, a grant scheme set up by Lord Howard Florey, co-recipient of the 1947 Nobel Prize for the discovery of penicillin, to bring promising European scholars to Oxford. He was subsequently (1973-76) awarded a senior research fellowship of the Swiss National Science Foundation for research to be undertaken, in turn, in Oxford, Cambridge, MIT and Harvard. In Oxford he wrote a DPhil thesis under the supervision of David Soskice, John Stanton Flemming and Sir James Alexander Mirrlees (who would be Nobel Prize winner in 1996). From 1975 to 1984 he was lecturer and director of economic studies at The Queen's College, Oxford. After a spell at the Law Faculty of the Catholic University of Milan, in 1987 he was appointed full-professor of macro-economics at the University of Verona. In Switzerland he was for numerous years a member (and then chairman) of Canton Ticino's Research Commission on behalf of the Swiss National Science Foundation, and a co-founder in 1990 of the Centre for Banking Studies in Lugano-Vezia. From 1993 to 1997 he was a leading member (and then chairman) of the Steering Committee that laid the foundations and created the University of Lugano (the only Italian-speaking University outside Italy). There, from 1997 to 2014, he was a full professor of economic theory, and chairman of the Faculty of Economics (2005-2009). In 2009 he was awarded the Lincei Prize for economics, jointly with Andreu Mas-Colell. He has contributed widely to the Cambridge theory of income, wealth distribution and accumulation, by incorporating into the post-Keynesian model the well-known micro-economics life-cycle theory of the Nobel prizewinner Franco Modigliani. His papers have come out in Kyklos (International Review for Social Sciences), in the Oxford Economic Papers, The Economic Journal, and many other scholarly periodicals. He has published or edited volumes with Oxford University Press, Cambridge University Press (two volumes), Basil Blackwell (two volumes), Macmillan and Routledge. Jointly with Amalia Mirante he has recently published with Palgrave-Macmillan the Compendium of Italian Economists at Oxbridge, and An Intellectual Biography of Luigi L. Pasinetti (Leading Scholar and System Builder of the Cambridge School of Economics). In the early 1990s he sparked off a controversy with Nobel Prizewinner Paul A. Samuelson and Koiki Miyazaki in the Oxford Economics Papers on the validity of the Keynes-Kaldor-Pasinetti theorem of the Cambridge distribution theory. For three decades (1988-2018) he used to spend part of the year in Cambridge (UK), where he was life-member of Darwin College, with his wife Evelina née Buzzi, and their four children. He has published two volumes on his ancestors going back the 14th century in Canton Ticino, Switzerland, where he has reconstructed the demographic strategies and wealth accumulation processes across six centuries (1400-2000) and nearly 20 generations. In 2005 he was elected as foreign fellow of the Istituto Lombardo, Accademia di Scienze e Lettere, Milan, and in 2011 a foreign fellow of the National Academy of the Lincei, Rome. Since 1984 he has been life-member of The Queen's College, University of Oxford.
